Over 30,000 Americans have died in the Vietnam war . . . Thousands of Biafrans have died from starvation . . . June 5th was another memorable day for the Kennedy family, while November 5th will stand out in Richard M. Nixon's mind . . . Despite a rise in employment, U. S. welfare costs soared to $8.8 billion . . . The Pueblo and its crew were returned . . . Commander Lloyd Bucher wept convulsively at the California inquiry . . . Pope Paul set forth the decree that birth control is an artificial preventive of God's Will . . . 155 taxpayers earned over $200,000 a year and paid no income tax without breaking the law . . . Riots continued in all major cities . . . Mayor Dailey called for return to law and order during the Chicago catastrophe . . . and campus revolutions all over the world went on and on and on . . .

Starbly, carefully engineered and constructed in serious concern that the rains may not cause destruction or evacuation, The Great Flooded Well of Farburyville, Kentucky, like The Great Wall of China, protects from the intrusion of outside invaders... It ends our... We are like an impressionistic painting splattered on a small canvas... Here we step out of that painting and speculate about whether or not the earth is flat... Should we open to intruders, we take the risk of having to realize that Union College is not the focal point of the universe... of being compelled to admit that shelter is the least painful way of existence... of having to cure... It is that Union College is too scared to exist in a profane world of human suffering, or is it... Has Union College, 1968-69, suffered only from indifference?

To one who thinks that "Union College is ahead of the times."

DEDICATION: MAILON A. MILLER

When Mahlon Miller took the office of the Union College presidency ten years ago, students returned in the fall wondering what this new structure was all about. The problem for the next few years was to get them to take it seriously. The idea of students having representation and voting power on faculty committees was progressive and frightening to the apathy of the 50's.

Mahlon Miller believes in the survival of that comprehensive and often ambiguous term, "liberal arts." In his words, "Union College will remain small, dedicated to a breadth of learning as opposed to narrow specialization, and concerned about the intellectual development of the student and development in terms of social, moral, and religious considerations."

When asked about the changes that have taken place in the past ten years, Dr. Miller was optimistic in describing the advances that have been made. When asked whether or not there is a discernable difference between the Union College of the 50's and that of the 60's, he replied "Yes, the whole society has changed. It is reflected on this campus and every other campus. It can't help but be."

And, when asked specifically about the year 1968-69, Dr. Miller said, "I haven't felt that there have been any outstanding problems that would make the year unique in the history of the institution. Student activism hasn't been very much different than any other year. The college will never come to its knees over the hair and beard issue, but it will over its academic program. The problems arise from the students who can do better, should do better, but won't. The year has been historic in the initiation of serious effort in total curriculum study that will lead to modification, and very important in relationship to our efforts in inter-institutional effort."

Eisenhower Proclaimed Citizen of the World

Editor's Note

It is apparent to even the least aware among us that 1968-69 has been a controversial year, a year in which colleges have been shocked out of their sheltered walls into participation in the, too often, violent world. It would be impossible to prepare a yearbook of Union College without including the world events during this period. It is for this reason that headlines from newspapers comprise the copy of the 1969 Stespean.

Certainly the conflict throughout the nation is representative of the yearbook theme that nothing is sacred anymore. There has been conflict between countries, between statesmen, between intellectuals and between students and administration. Union College has not remained unaffected by these happenings. It would be impossible to deny recognition of or to be apathetic towards the present world. While learning used to be the prime goal of the college student, suddenly it seems that their voice must be heard as they argue against war, against poor curriculum, against denial of personal freedom and against administration. However negative the young people's approach, it is nevertheless, often an honest if sometimes misdirected attempt to change the troubled world. If this yearbook seems too bitter or negative to those who cannot accept the current situation, it is only because dusty traditions and ideals are now being questioned. I would hope that this yearbook will be meaningful to the students at Union as it presents the year. Nothing, including the Stespean 1969, is sacred anymore!
